

The 3 Most Expensive States to Raise a Family and Where You Should Move for a Better Life!

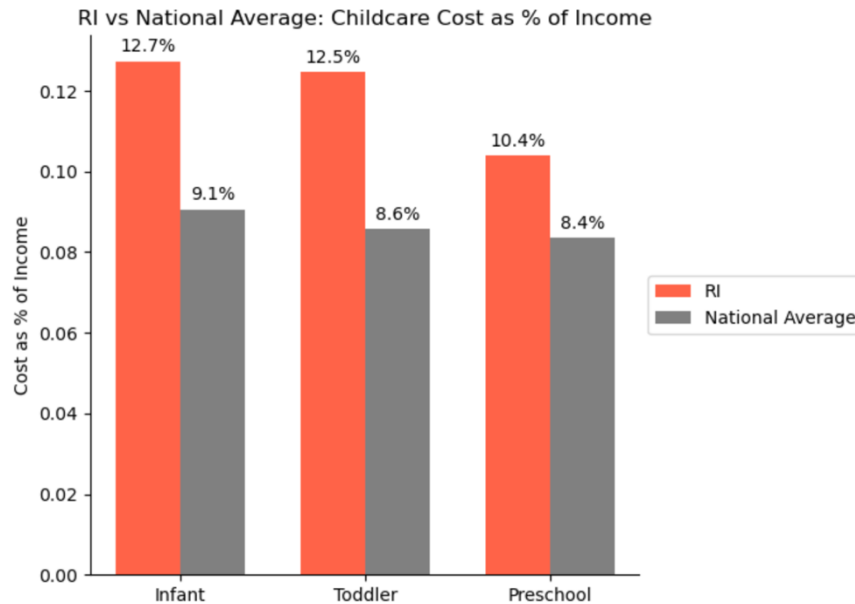

Do you feel like the costs of raising children are leaving you drowning in expenses and childcare bills? The answer may not be that you don't make enough money or that the cost of living is increasing. The real problem may be where you live! Scroll to see the 3 most expensive states to put a child in childcare. If you live in one of these states, it may be worth considering the 3 lower cost alternatives below.

3rd Most Expensive State: Alaska

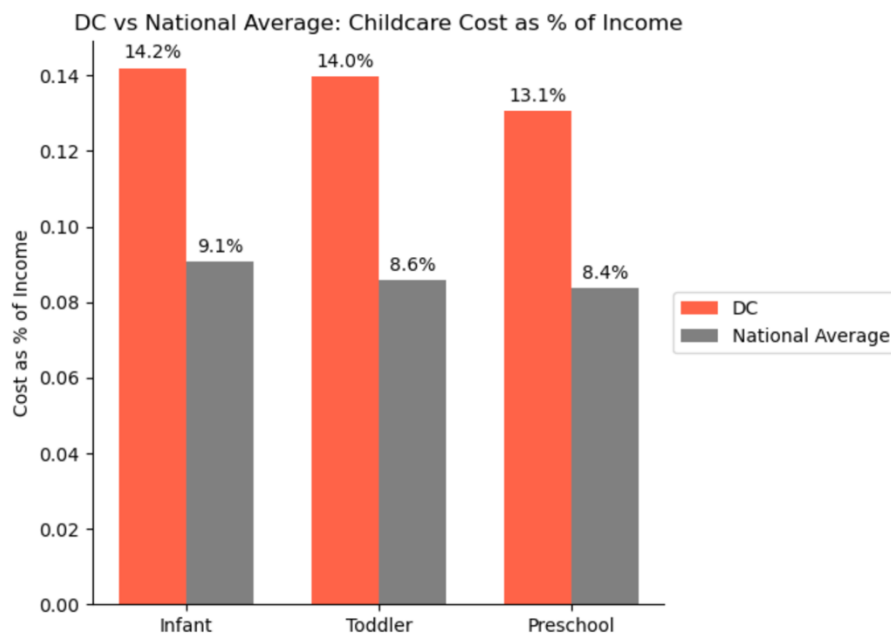

America's Last Frontier comes with its costs. Families will spend over 11% of their income on family-based childcare through all stages of childhood.

2nd Most Expensive State: Rhode Island

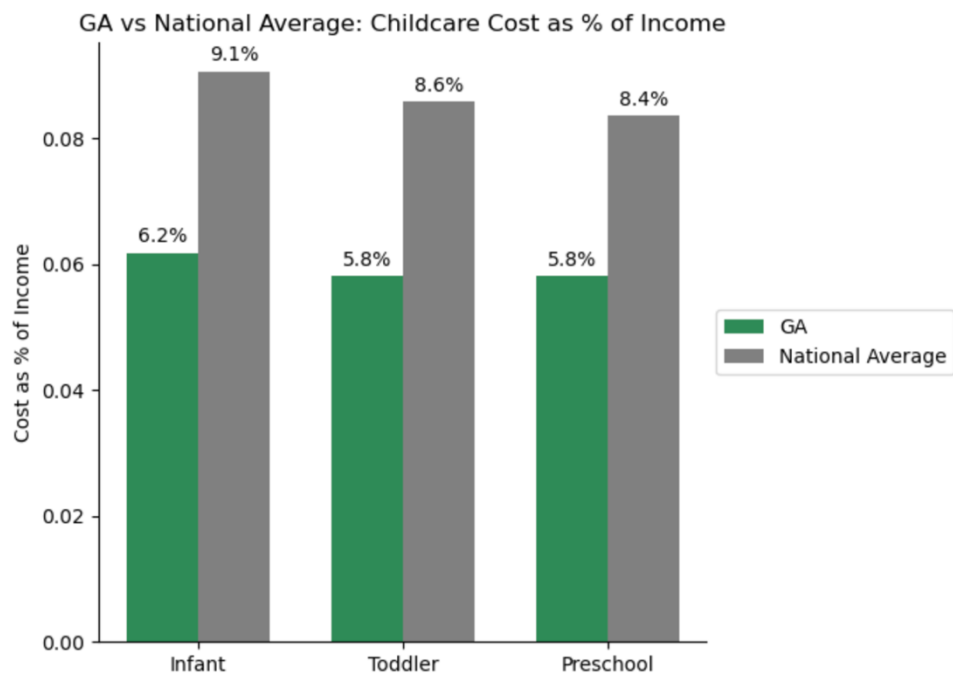

Smallest state with some of the largest costs. Families will spend over 12% of their income on family-based childcare through the infant and toddler stages before receiving a small break in the preschool years.

Most Expensive State: Washington DC

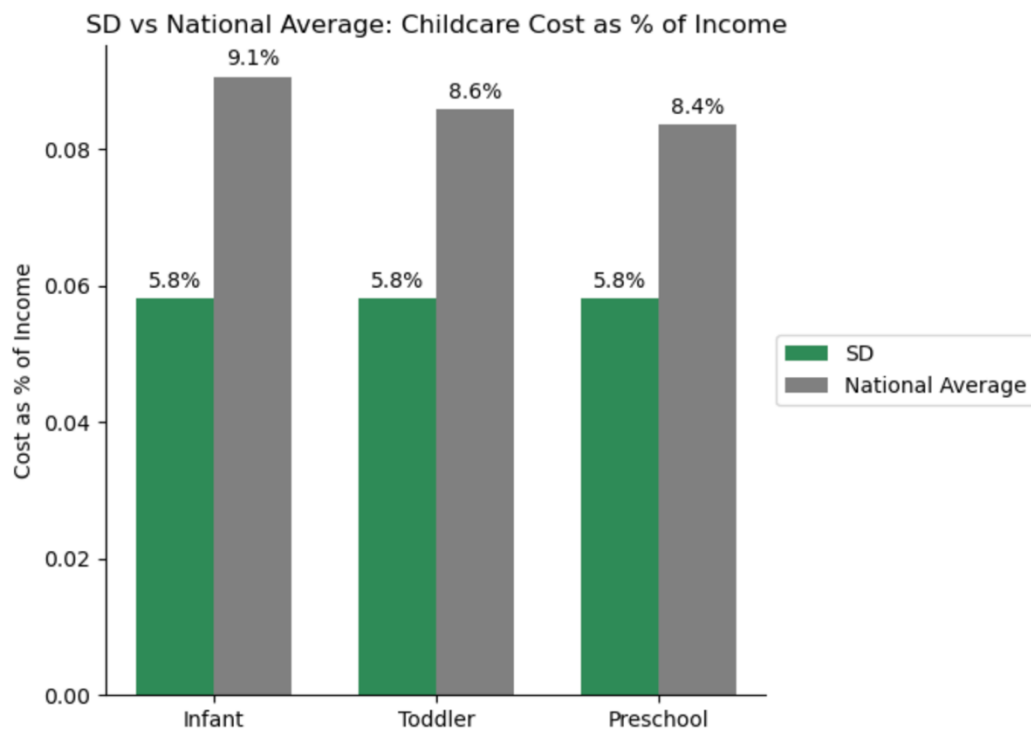

America's capital is capitalizing on the childcare market. Families will spend over 13 percent of their income on family-based childcare before kindergarten.

3rd Least Expensive State: Georgia

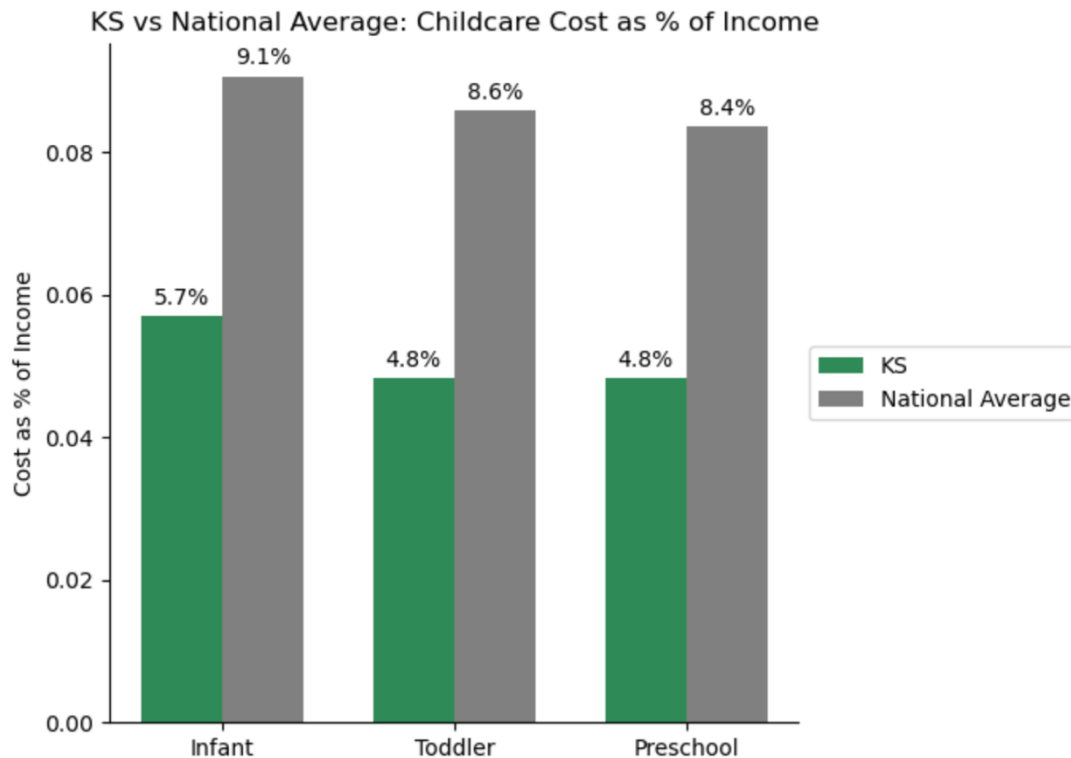

Georgia on your mind? It should be. Family-based childcare costs in the state barely exceed 6% of family income in the infant year.

2nd Least Expensive State: South Dakota

Great Faces, Great Places, Great Childcare? South Dakota! South Dakota provides consistently low childcare costs throughout the childcare years. Allowing families to set a consistent budget.

Least Expensive State: Kansas

“Theres no place like home!”. Much like Dorothy you will be saying this too if you move to Kansas. Kansas posts the cheapest family-based childcare in the nation. Posting big advantages over the national average.

8.6%

Percent of Income Saved

Moving from one of the high childcare cost states to a lower one could save your family up to 8.6% of your annual income. Allowing you to have more disposable income and improve the quality of life for your children and spouse. So go ahead come to Georgia, South Dakota and Kansas. Your future is calling.